#1 – Be Prepared. Preparation is one of the key elements to being an effective and entertaining. They'll consulting with the formal wedding planners or bride-rep., on what they expect from them.

They'll prepare a complete order of events - a "run sheet" of what is taking place throughout the reception, from start to finish so you are able to map out your material for the event.

#2 – Plenty of Material on hand. That includes jokes, amusing stories, and audience participation games to entertain the wedding guests and keep the wedding reception flowing smoothly.

#3 – Practice (a Mock wedding) before the wedding reception. (Opening welcome speech to the wedding guests, the bridal party introductions, the introductions preceding the speakers who will be giving wedding speeches and toasts, the wedding mc speech if the bride and groom have requested one, the jokes and amusing stories you tell, and the announcements).

#4 – Being unprepared (prepare or expect - and planning for - the unexpected...)

The microphone doesn't work. The seating arrangements are wrong. The caterers are behind in preparing the main meal. The wedding photographer takes longer than anticipated with the wedding pictures. The bridal party is late arriving and you have a room full of wedding guests to entertain in the meantime. Expecting glitches to happen is a human trait that everyone should have in "front" and make contingency plans in consultation with the wedding planners before the wedding reception.

#5 – MC; not just public speaking. Knowing wedding emcee, may have to fill several roles before and during the wedding reception. You'll might be called to wear the hat of planner, advisor, interviewer, coordinator, public speaker, and entertainer. Each role will have different duties and responsibilities...

Help plan reception, or advise wedding planners, co-ordinate events with the bridal party, the people giving the wedding speeches and toasts, the entertainers, the caterers, the photographer, the videographer. You'll interview members of the immediate family, the bride and groom, and perhaps their close friends to get background material to use during the reception or for your Wedding MC Speech. You'll use your public speaking and entertainment skills to amuse and entertain the wedding guests during the wedding reception and keep the program flowing smoothly.
